

Special Issue on
Global Challenges in Environmental Sustainability

Call for Papers

Global Challenges in Environmental Sustainability encompass the critical issues that threaten the balance between human activities and the natural world, jeopardizing long-term environmental health. These challenges include climate change, resource depletion, deforestation, biodiversity loss, and pollution, all of which have far-reaching consequences for ecosystems and human societies. Addressing these concerns requires innovative solutions in areas such as renewable energy, waste management, sustainable agriculture, and conservation. Achieving environmental sustainability involves balancing economic growth with ecological preservation, fostering global cooperation, and creating policies and technologies that reduce environmental impact while promoting resilience and equity for future generations.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Global Challenges in Environmental Sustainability. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Climate change
- Renewable energy
- Biodiversity loss
- Deforestation
- Water scarcity
- Pollution control
- Circular economy
- Sustainable agriculture
- Carbon footprint
- Greenhouse gas emissions
- Ecological footprint
- Climate resilience
- Sustainable development goals (SDGs)
- Waste management
- Environmental justice
- Land degradation
- Global warming
- Ecosystem services
- Environmental policy
- Green technologies

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Global Challenges in Environmental Sustainability” should be selected during your submission.
