

Special Issue on Health Psychology and Health Promotion Call for Papers

Health psychology is a specialty area that focuses on how biology, psychology, behavior, and social factors influence health and illness. Other terms including medical psychology and behavioral medicine are sometimes used interchangeably with the term health psychology. It's involved in health, illness, and health care, and essential and important for health promotion and disease prevention.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Health Psychology and Health Promotion. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Health behaviors and mental health
- Mental disorders
- Psychotherapy
- Mental health interventions
- Physical and mental health
- Rehabilitation psychology
- Stress and depression management
- Psychosocial factors and health
- Models in health psychology
- Assessments and evaluations
- Applied behavior analysis
- Promotion of cognitive health
- Mental health and well-being
- Health psychology and quality of life
- Chronic illness and mental health
- Psychology in pain management
- Clinical psychology
- Health psychology & COVID-19

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Health Psychology and Health Promotion” should be chosen during your submission.
