

Special Issue on Economic Law and Commercial Law

Call for Papers

The purpose of economic law is to protect public interests in society, and its basic principle is to ensure economic fairness. The purpose of commercial law is to promote profit, and its basic principle is commercial autonomy. Economic law belongs to public law, mainly used to intervene in the national economy; commercial law belongs to private law, mainly used to regulate commercial transactions. The main body of economic law has two parts, one is the state, the other is the economic organizations and individuals. Economic law mainly plays its own role through the macro-control of the state.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring economic law and commercial law. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Market regulation law
- Public economic law
- Law on economic activities
- Enterprise law
- Economic policy, economic system and economic law
- Economic disputes
- Maritime law
- Commercial trade law

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Economic Law and Commercial Law” should be chosen during your submission.
