

Special Issue on Law and Human Rights

Call for Papers

Law and Human Rights examines the legal frameworks, principles, and practices designed to protect fundamental human rights and promote justice within societies. It explores how national and international laws address issues such as civil liberties, political rights, social justice, equality, and access to justice, as well as the enforcement and interpretation of human rights norms. Integrating perspectives from legal studies, political science, sociology, and ethics, this theme analyzes the roles of courts, governments, international organizations, and civil society in upholding rights, resolving conflicts, and advancing the rule of law. Research in this area contributes to the development of fair, accountable, and inclusive legal systems that safeguard human dignity and social equity.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Law and Human Rights. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Access to justice and legal aid
- Children's rights and youth law
- Civil rights and anti-discrimination law
- Comparative legal systems
- Constitutional law and civil liberties
- Corporate social responsibility and business ethics
- Criminal law and justice
- Environmental law and rights
- Gender and human rights
- Human rights enforcement and litigation
- Humanitarian law and refugee protection
- Indigenous rights and minority protections
- International criminal law and tribunals
- International human rights law
- Public policy and legal reform
- Transitional justice and post-conflict legal frameworks

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Law and Human Rights” should be selected during your submission.
