

Special Issue on Criminology, Law and Social Justice

Call for Papers

Criminology, Law and Social Justice examines the complex relationships between crime, legal systems, and societal responses to inequality and injustice. This special issue explores contemporary research on the causes, patterns, and prevention of crime, as well as the role of legal institutions in promoting fairness, accountability, and social equity. It welcomes interdisciplinary perspectives that analyze criminal behavior, policing practices, judicial processes, penal policies, human rights, and community-based justice initiatives. By integrating insights from criminology, legal studies, sociology, and public policy, the issue aims to deepen understanding of how law and justice systems can address social disparities and contribute to safer and more equitable societies.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Criminology, Law and Social Justice. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Community policing
- Comparative criminal justice
- Corrections and penology
- Courts and judicial processes
- Crime prevention strategies
- Criminal justice systems
- Criminal law
- Criminological theory
- Cybercrime and digital law
- Human rights and justice
- Juvenile justice
- Legal policy and reform
- Policing and law enforcement
- Restorative justice
- Social inequality and crime
- Victimology

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - *Criminology, Law and Social Justice” should be selected during your submission.
