

Special Issue on Law, Society, and Legal Culture

Call for Papers

Law, Society, and Legal Culture is an interdisciplinary field that examines the interactions between legal systems, social structures, and cultural norms. It explores how laws are created, interpreted, and applied within different societies, and how social values, traditions, and behaviors influence legal practice and institutions. The field addresses issues such as access to justice, legal pluralism, human rights, and the role of law in social change. By analyzing both formal legislation and informal legal practices, it provides insights into the development of legal culture, the effectiveness of governance, and the relationship between law, power, and society.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Law, Society, and Legal Culture. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Legal sociology
- Comparative law
- Legal anthropology
- Human rights law
- Access to justice
- Legal pluralism
- Judicial behavior
- Law and social change
- Criminal justice studies
- Constitutional law and society
- Legal ethics
- Public law and governance
- Law and globalization
- Indigenous and customary law
- Law and social policy
- Legal education and culture

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Law, Society, and Legal Culture” should be selected during your submission.
