

Special Issue on Economics, Law, and Policy

Call for Papers

Economics, Law, and Policy examines the interconnected roles of economic systems, legal frameworks, and policy design in shaping societal development and governance. It invites interdisciplinary research that analyzes how legal institutions and regulatory structures influence economic behavior, market efficiency, and public welfare. Topics may include fiscal and monetary policy, international trade law, regulatory economics, institutional governance, public policy evaluation, and the legal dimensions of economic development. By integrating theoretical insights with empirical analysis, this issue aims to deepen understanding of how coordinated economic, legal, and policy mechanisms can promote stability, equity, and sustainable growth in an increasingly complex global environment.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Economics, Law, and Policy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Microeconomics and market behavior
- Macroeconomic policy analysis
- International trade and economic law
- Public finance and fiscal policy
- Monetary policy and central banking
- Regulatory economics and compliance law
- Institutional economics and governance
- Legal theory and jurisprudence
- Competition law and antitrust policy
- Public policy design and evaluation
- Development economics and law
- Labor economics and employment law
- Environmental law and economic policy
- Corporate law and economic regulation
- Cost–benefit analysis and policy assessment
- Political economy and policy institutions

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Economics, Law, and Policy” should be selected during your submission.
