

Special Issue on Constitutional Law

Call for Papers

Constitutional Law examines the fundamental legal principles that govern the structure, powers, and functions of government, as well as the rights and freedoms of individuals. It explores the interpretation and application of constitutions, the separation of powers, judicial review, federalism, constitutional amendments, and the protection of civil liberties and human rights. The field also addresses contemporary constitutional challenges arising from political, social, and technological developments, promoting the rule of law, democratic governance, and accountability in both national and comparative contexts.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Constitutional Law. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Constitutional interpretation
- Judicial review
- Separation of powers
- Federalism and decentralization
- Fundamental rights
- Civil liberties
- Human rights protection
- Constitutional amendments
- Electoral law
- Legislative powers
- Executive authority
- Constitutional litigation
- Administrative constitutionalism
- Comparative constitutional law
- Emergency powers
- Constitutional governance

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Constitutional Law” should be selected during your submission.
