

Special Issue on Research on Health Care Reform

Call for Papers

Health care reform is general rubric used to discuss major health policy creation or changes. Governmental policy can affect health care delivery in a given place and is one of the most important rules in each country. Health care reform typically attempts to broaden the population that receives health care coverage, improve the access to health care specialists, improve the quality of health care, decrease the cost of health care and so on. As health care reform has close relationship with our human life, further discussion and improvement on it seems necessary and significant.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring research on health care reform. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Contents and aim of health care reform
- Organizations and health care system
- Health care politics
- Health insurance
- Differences between countries
- Benefits people get from the policy
- Limitations and problems

Authors should read over the journal's Authors' Guidelines carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue - Research on Health Care Reform” should be chosen during your submission.
