Special Issue on Information Systems and Computer Science

Call for Papers

Information Systems and Computer Science is an interdisciplinary academic field that examines the design, development and application of computing technologies and information systems to solve complex problems. It covers algorithms, software engineering, databases, artificial intelligence, cybersecurity, and systems architecture, alongside organizational and managerial aspects of information use. The field integrates technical innovation with data management and decision support to enhance efficiency, security and digital transformation across industries and society.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Information Systems and Computer Science. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Algorithms, complexity and theoretical foundations
- Algorithms and data structures
- Artificial intelligence and machine learning
- Computer systems, architecture and networks
- Human computer interaction
- Software engineering
- Database systems and data management
- Information systems development & management
- Data management, mining & analytics
- Cybersecurity and information assurance
- Cloud computing
- Computer networks and distributed systems
- Information systems and decision sciences
- Management information system
- Domain-specific and applied information systems
- Data analytics and business intelligence

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed
