Special Issue on English Language and Linguistics

Call for Papers

Modern English is widely regarded as the lingua franca of the world and the standard language in many fields, including computer coding, international business and higher education. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of English Language and Linguistics.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring English Language and Linguistics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- English grammar
- English language teaching and learning
- English globalization
- English language testing and assessment
- Language contact and language change
- English literature
- English language and composition
- Dialects, accents, and varieties

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - English Language and Linguistics” should be selected during your submission.

Special Issue Timetable:
